Memorandum

To: Commissioners of the member Insurance Commissions of the NJCE JIF
From: NJCE JIF Underwriting Manager
Date: July 25, 2019
Re: Property Insurance Coverage Options

At the last meeting of the NJCE JIF Coverage Committee, the Committee discussed Property coverage for Drones (UAS) and Working Dogs. The Committee decided to recommend the Insurance Commissions individually review and decide on these coverages, as the NJCE will not participate in the coverage. As such, please review the following optional Property coverages:

1. Drones (UASs): The Insurance Commission should consider providing a sublimit of Property (1st party physical damage) coverage for member-owned drones of up to $100,000. When considering the sublimit, typical drones owned by public entities tend to be in the $10,000 to $50,000 price range, along with potentially thousands of dollars in equipment attached to those drones.
2. Working Animals: Animals are considered property in New Jersey (along with just about every other state), and so not subject to the vicarious, mental anguish type claims. The Committee particularly discussed working dogs, such as those with law enforcement. It may cost a few thousand dollars just for replacement of the animal, not to mention the thousands in training, with an estimated total replacement cost of $20,000 each. The Commission should consider offering its members Property (1st party physical damage) coverage for its members' working dogs up to a $100,000 sublimit. In considering the sublimit, you can make this a lower limit or a per-dog limit, but a lower limit may not be a concern if the Commission is comfortable with the maximum exposure. Additionally, the Commission should review the coverage guideline, attached.

Working Animals

Covered Losses:

- Permanent injury, where animal can no longer perform described function for member.
 - Could exclude this as this could get into a conflict with general healthcare costs.
- Death, including humane destruction.

Covered Causes of Loss:

- All covered causes of loss
 - Could be more specific, like fire, lightning, wind, hail vehicles, etc.
- Accidental escape
- Accidental or intentional injury
 - Could be more specific to shooting, stabbing or poisoning by someone other than you.

Indemnification:

- Replacement Cost valuation, so cost to repair or replace with like kind.
- Retraining costs.

Active Shooter / Assailant

There is coverage readily available in the insurance marketplace for Active Shooter or Active Assailant events. Your regular insurance program doesn't have any direct exclusions for these types of events, so you can expect it to respond. For instance, if an active shooter event occurred on your premises, and third parties there for the event made a claim against you for their injuries, your General Liability policy would respond. In the same event, if damage occurred to your premises, your Property Insurance policy would respond. So what is Active Shooter/Assailant insurance for?

Active Shooter/Assailant insurance is meant to cover many of the other key costs associated with an active shooter type of event not covered by your core insurance program. Such costs include the following.

Business Interruption

- ✓ Whether it is a loss of revenue at the location, incurring expenses above normal to recover or a shutdown/denial of access determined by authorities, your business interruption costs can be covered.

Public Relations

- ✓ The insurer will typically have a panel of public relations consultancies to utilize immediately following an event.

Relocation

- ✓ Your operations may need to be temporarily or permanently relocated, and these expenses can be covered.

Counseling Costs

- ✓ Whether it is the directly affected visitors and employees or the people of the surrounding community, you may want or need to provide counseling and/or psychiatric services.

Medical Expenses

- ✓ Most policies will extend no-fault medical expenses to affected individuals for immediate triage.

Employee Retraining and Recruitment Costs

- ✓ Current employees who endured the event may need retraining for their current job or a new role within the organization to fill positions created by the event. Also, employees may leave or no longer be able to work with the organization, and so new employee recruitment will be important.

Security Costs

- ✓ Costs for additional security measures required following the event to mitigate any further adverse effects.

Other Expenses

- ✓ Following insurer review and approval, there may be other expenses you need that do not fit within the above categories.

As mentioned, the marketplace for this insurance is robust with varying custom policy forms. In addition to the above, you will find more coverages available from various insurers, such as demolition of emotionally scarred buildings. The NJCE will be providing group quotes for Active Shooter/Assailant coverage at the 2020 renewal.

SAFETY DIRECTOR BULLETINS

- Office Safety – July 23.
- New School Year - Driver Awareness – August 27.

Safety in the Office Environment

Safety in the office environment is not automatic. It is easy to let your guard down in an air-conditioned, carpeted, and well-lit office. DON'T. While offices are safer than a water treatment plant, there are hazards that need to be addressed by office managers and office workers.

Avoiding slip – trip – fall injuries

S-T-F injuries are the most common and costly injuries to office workers. The Safety Director recommends work places be periodically inspected for hazardous conditions. Pay particular attention to:

- Surfaces of floors – Carpets can fray and lift up. Tiles can get slippery or loosen. Water can accumulate by doors, or in front of kitchen and bathroom sinks. Even the odd piece of paper left on the floor becomes a slip hazard.

Managers should establish a culture where conditions such as spilled water are handled immediately as an act of caring for coworkers and visitors. Provide warning signs and caution tape for when conditions cannot be corrected by office staff and must be reported to facilities. Follow-up on reported deficiencies so that they are not allowed to exist indefinitely.

- Objects on or near the floor – Look for typical objects that present trip hazards, such as electrical cords, open drawers or boxes and purses on the floor. Make it a habit to store these items in a place other than on the floor next to you, or in an aisle. Carrying large items in front of you can obstruct your view of the floor, further increasing the risk. Avoid this behavior and use a cart instead.
- Lighting – Poor lighting is a contributing factor in many slip and trip injuries. Stairwells are especially troublesome areas. It is not uncommon for facilities to reduce electrical bills by turning off some light fixtures in stairwells. The national standard for illumination in offices varies from 250 to 500 lumens, depending on the task. There are smartphone apps that can measure light levels to guide managers when additional lighting is needed.

Standing on chairs is a dangerous act. Get a ladder or step stool

Musculoskeletal injuries from lifting & carrying

Strains and sprains to shoulders, knees and backs are also among the most common injuries to office workers. The Safety Director recommends these best practices to protect workers when lifting and carrying objects:

- Managers have an obligation to discuss with workers their expectation of how much should be lifted and carried by office staff. Consider the weight, size and shape of the object, the height of the lift and the level the object will be placed down on. Use common lifts such as a box of computer paper, desktop printers, water jugs, etc. as examples of what should be attempted by office workers and when help should be requested. Make it clear that you WANT staff to ask for help with heavy or awkward objects, and EXPECT coworkers to help each other.

This bulletin is intended for general information purposes only. It should not be construed as legal advice or legal opinion regarding any specific or factual situation. Always follow your organization's policies and procedures as presented by your manager or supervisor. For further information regarding this bulletin, contact your Safety Director at 877.398.3046.

- Mechanical aids to assist with lifting and carrying must be readily available. Hand trucks, carts, or even a chair with wheels can reduce the strain of carrying heavy objects. Or, make multiple trips. The closer the device is to the area, the more likely it will be used. Many injuries occur when a hand truck was present, but on the other side of the building or another floor. The answer is having multiple devices.
- Store heavier items on shelves that are at waist-height. Store lighter objects on the floor and top shelves. When accessing items from shelves that are over shoulder-height, use a rolling set of stairs instead of a ladder. Proper use of a ladder requires three-points-of-contact. Using two hands to lift an object from a shelf while standing on a ladder will always violate this basic safety rule.

Setting up your work station

Proper body mechanics can help improve productivity and reduce discomfort. The ideal desk / chair set-up replicates your neutral body posture. OSHA's Computer Station eTool gives the following guidelines to initially adjust your chair:

- Hands, wrists, and forearms are straight, in-line and roughly parallel to the floor.
- Head is level or bent slightly forward, facing forward, and balanced; generally in-line with the torso.
- Shoulders are relaxed and upper arms hang normally at the side of the body.
- Elbows stay in close to the body and are bent between 90° and 120°.
- Feet are fully supported by the floor or a footrest may be used if the desk height is not adjustable.
- Back is fully supported with appropriate lumbar support when sitting vertical or leaning back slightly.
- Thighs and hips are supported by a well-padded seat and generally parallel to the floor.
- Knees are about the same height as the hips with the feet slightly forward.

Once you have adjusted your chair to these generic guidelines, you may have to fine tune the adjustments to better suit YOUR neutral or relaxed posture. Consider these tips for setting up the top of your desk:

- Monitors are between 20 and 28 inches away, and the top of the screen is at or just below eye level. Place monitors perpendicular to windows to reduce glare.
- Keyboards should be directly in front of you and at a height where your shoulders are relaxed and your elbows are close to your body. Your wrists ought to be straight and in-line with your forearms. Padded supports can help achieve this alignment and to avoid resting hands or forearms on the edges of a desk.
- Mouse / pointers are positioned close to keyboard. Keyboard shortcuts can reduce the strain of reaching for pointers. Trackballs, touch pads, and fingertip joysticks offer opportunities to further reduce stresses of reaching and moving a traditional mouse.
- Telephones also need to be kept close to you to minimize reaching for the handset. If work requires significant time on the phone, or entering data onto a computer while on the phone, a headset or speaker will reduce shoulder and neck strain.

OSHA (www.osha.gov) and N.J. PEOSH / DOH (<https://www.nj.gov/health/workplacehealthandsafety/peosh/>) offer additional guidance. Even with perfectly adjusted and laid-out chairs and desks, workers are encouraged to periodically move from their desks for several seconds and stretch those static muscles.

Safety in an office setting is not automatic. It takes a commitment on the part of office managers, office workers, and facilities to create a place that is free of recognizable hazards to workers and visitors. Office managers are encouraged to do three things:

1. Talk to staff frequently about your expectations of creating a safe workplace and hold them accountable.
2. Conduct Job Site Observations. Office tasks can be made safer if we look for better alternatives.
3. Inspect your areas for undesirable conditions. Fix or report them and document your efforts.

New School Year Driver Awareness Reminder

The new school year will be starting INSERT YOUR DATE HERE. Now would be a good time to remind everyone of some things that come with the new school year.

- Younger children are more likely to be excited to see their friends, meet their new teachers, and get their seats in freshly decorated classrooms. Younger children are also more likely to make mistakes around roads.
- Many children will be starting new schools.
 - They will be learning new walking paths, either to the school or to a bus stop
 - They may not have given themselves enough time on the new route, and will be hurrying.
 - Their parents will be learning new driving patterns at an unfamiliar school.
- Older, high school children may be driving their own cars to school for the first time, also struggling with new traffic routes, congested school zones, and even more congested and confusing parking lots.
- Some schools have made adjustments to their drop-off or pick-up zones. School crossing guard posts may have been changed to meet demands.
- All of this can have a ripple-effect to other drivers who will be coping with the actions, inactions, or bad actions of children and drivers.
- Add anything else that may have occurred in your area that affects walking paths or traffic patterns around schools.
 - _____
 - _____

I want to take this opportunity to remind everyone to be especially aware as they operate their personal vehicles and work vehicles. The next couple of weeks can be challenging. Please:

- Watch your speed. A couple of mph faster will not make a real difference in your arrival time
- Scan sidewalks and parked cars for signs of movement
- Keep a safe following distance. Even if you anticipated something, the driver in front of you may not be as alert as you are.
- Be particularly alert at intersections. Practice 'covering your brake' when called for.
